

CURT FLETCHER

COMEDIAN

Curt Fletcher's professional comedy career began after winning the 2003 Great Southwest Laff Off. Since then he's performed at clubs, colleges, and casinos all over the country; including the Improvs in Tempe, AZ; Houston, TX; and Denver, CO. He's also advanced to the semifinals in every comedy competition he's entered, including HBO's Lucky 21 contest in 2007.

Curt's dry, clever, and twisted sense of humor landed him the main role in independent film, "Mismatch.com," receiving great reviews at local film festivals. It also lead to a role in another film, "Pink Slipped."

Curt Fletcher prides himself on his joke writing abilities, comedic timing, and deadpan delivery that few can few can match. He enjoys considerable success on the college market in the Southwest, including the U of NM's football team prior to their bowl victory over Nevada, which Curt thinks he's responsible for.
