

LANG PARKER

COMEDIAN

Lang shocked the judges on NBC's "Last Comic Standing." when she came out in her rough tomboy attire and asked, "Have you ever been mistaken for a lesbian?"

Lang got a head start as a tomboy growing up in Muskego, Wisconsin, raised by a backwoods father and three brothers ("I played with Barbie...I strung her from a willow tree and shot at her."). From dance recitals at age 5 to the Milwaukee Performing Arts Center in high school; by the time Lang hit L.A. she realized that a corn fed farm girl wasn't going to become a dancer in (unless you're a woman that weighs less than a wire hanger) L.A. But luckily a friend talked her into taking a stand-up comedy class and she found her true calling.

Lang won't quit until she follows in her heroes' footsteps—Carol Burnett, John Belushi, Chris Farley and Lucy- and makes the country fall down laughing.
