

MARC YAFFEE

COMEDIAN-WRITER

A gifted writer and performer, Marc delivers original, relatable material, inspired by his multi-cultural upbringing and Navajo roots.

One of a few touring Native American Comedians, Marc careens across the comedy landscape blazing a trail of laughs that has made him a hit with club, casino and corporate audiences alike. Marc is the creator and co-star of Pow Wow Comedy Jam, recently named National Indian Gaming Association's "Entertainers of the Year".

A perennial later bloomer, Marc didn't walk until age three, didn't ride a bike until age seven and didn't start his comedy until his 30s (he still can't tie his shoes). Quickly making up for lost time, Marc's managed to work stages across the globe winning fans of all ages and stripes with his likeability and rapid fire delivery.

The window to comedy started when arc opened his own traffic school in the mid-90s. Realizing that he could entertain a captive audience of traffic violators, he decided to try his hand at open mic-nite and never looked back. Within 2 years, he won a competition landed a spot on Galavision Network's Que Locos! And... started writing for George Carlin's Laugh.com. Marc's performed at the Boston Comedy Festival, appeared on the PBS special Crossing the Line and SiTV's Latino Laugh Festival.

While continuing a busy work schedule, In his spare time, Marc performs overseas for US troops where he's known to overindulge in falafel and hookah bars, sneak onto aircraft carriers in the Persian Gulf and shave his head on the back of a flatbed truck while performing for Marines in the desert of Iraq.
